Some Commonly Asked Questions
About Real Estate Appraisers and Appraisals
Some Commonly Asked Questions
About Real Estate Appraisers and Appraisals

Who are real estate appraisers, and what do they do? Here are some answers!

What is an appraisal?
An appraisal is a professional appraiser’s opinion of value. The preparation of an appraisal involves research into appropriate market areas; the assembly and analysis of information pertinent to a property; and the knowledge, experience and professional judgment of the appraiser.

What is the role of the appraiser?
The role of the appraiser is to provide objective, impartial and unbiased opinions about the value of real property — providing assistance to those who own, manage, sell, invest in and/or lend money on the security of real estate.

What qualifications must appraisers have?
States require appraisers to be state licensed or certified in order to provide appraisals to federally regulated lenders. However, appraisers who become Designated members of the Appraisal Institute typically surpass the minimum state requirements. They fulfill rigorous educational and experience requirements and must adhere to strict standards and a code of professional ethics. The Appraisal Institute currently confers the MAI designation on appraisers who are experienced in the valuation of commercial, industrial, residential and other types of properties. The SRA designation is held by appraisers who are experienced in the analysis and valuation of residential real property. The AI-GRS designation is held by appraisers who are experienced in general appraisal review, while the AI-RRS designation is held by appraisers who are experienced in residential appraisal review.
How do well-credentialed appraisers add value to real estate transactions?

They bring knowledge, experience, impartiality and trust to the transaction. In so doing, they help their clients make sound decisions with regard to real property.

What are the components of an appraisal report?

Most appraisals are reported in writing, although in certain circumstances, an appraiser may provide an oral appraisal. A written appraisal report generally consists of a description of the property and its locale, an analysis of the “highest and best use” of the property, an analysis of sales of comparable properties “as near the subject property as possible,” and information regarding current real estate activity and/or market area trends.

What are the most important considerations in the valuation of real property?

The value indicated by recent sales of comparable properties, the current cost of reproducing or replacing a building, and the value that the property’s net earning power will support are the most important considerations in the valuation of real property.

What is the range of services appraisers provide?

- Estate planning and estate settlements
- Tax assessment review and advice
- Advice in eminent domain and condemnation property transactions
- Dispute resolution—including divorce, estate settlements, property partition suits, foreclosures, and zoning issues
- Feasibility studies
Expert witness testimony
Cost/benefit or investment analysis, for example, determining the financial return on remodeling
Land utilization studies
Supply and demand studies

When hiring an appraiser, what types of questions should I ask?

The following questions would be appropriate:
• Are you licensed or certified in the state in which you live?
• What professional designations do you have and from what groups?
• How long have you been in practice?
• What level of experience do you have in this particular market and with this type of property?
• Are you familiar with property in this neighborhood?
• What types of clients have you had (homeowners, estates, lenders, relocation companies)?

When in need of an appraiser, why should I hire a Designated member of the Appraisal Institute?

Appraisers who hold Appraisal Institute professional designations have met stringent educational requirements, have considerable professional experience and are required to adhere to strict standards and ethics of professional practice that exceed those required by state or federal law. Moreover, many Appraisal Institute designated members participate in continuing education programs — including those that emphasize the most-up-to-date valuation techniques — making them the preferred source for high-quality appraisal services.
How can I find a Designated member of the Appraisal Institute?

It’s easy to find a Designated member of the Appraisal Institute. Simply go to www.appraisalinstitute.org for our “Find an Appraiser” option. You can search for Designated members throughout the United States as well as abroad by name, city, county, state or metropolitan statistical area (MSA). You can also search for Designated members by business services and property type.
The Appraisal Institute is a global professional association of real estate appraisers, with nearly 22,000 professionals in almost 60 countries throughout the world. Its mission is to advance professionalism and ethics, global standards, methodologies and practices through the professional development of property economics worldwide. Organized in 1932, the Appraisal Institute advocates equal opportunity and nondiscrimination in the appraisal profession and conducts its activities in accordance with applicable federal, state and local laws. Individuals of the Appraisal Institute benefit from an array of professional education and advocacy programs, and may hold the prestigious MAI, SRPA, SRA, AI-GRS and AI-RRS designations. Learn more at www.appraisalinstitute.org.